

Each year, trainees from Mehler Technologies engage in a "Social Week". In December 2015 six trainees were released a week to assist the Tafel in Heinsberg and the SPS Foundation, a non-profit association for refugee assistance.

Support for refugees

Many refugee camps lack not only financial resources, but also volunteers who help active locally. For this reason, the trainees of Mehler Technologies made the clear decision to support refugees. For one week, they helped in the emergency shelter in Niederheid and in a refugee shared flat in Lindern and won herewith deeper insight into the everyday life of refugees.

Assisting the Tafel

Even before the rise in numbers of refugees there were people in need in our ranks. This often withdraw from society, so that they remain unnoticed in everyday life. To help these financially and often socially disadvantaged, the trainees supported the Tafel in Heinsberg. For this facility, they collected food in supermarkets to make it available for the Tafel.

Positive feedback

As a global employer Mehler Texnologies is aware of its responsibility towards society and proves good intention thanks to the project "Social Week" for three years. Besides social skills, the trainees benefit from the development of professional skills: the independent planning, implementation and taking charge of responsibility of the project are valuable experiences that have a positive impact on the performance of future tasks in their work environment. In addition, the social engagement is an opportunity to develop personally in a very different work experience.

Mehler Texnologies is one of the leading international companies in coated fabrics market. More than 53 million square metres of material are produced and sold each year under the brand names VALMEX®, POLYMAR® and AIRTEX®. Over 60 years of development and production experience represents the basis for sophisticated products.
