We strongly believe that transparency and traceability are paramount in today’s business landscape, indeed, we have established a framework for the entire complex supply chain, products, processes and suppliers.

TINTEX Textiles - headquarter

By sharing common conviction with thousands of like-minded companies TINTEX – as a business reality constantly striving for a responsible change in the textile industry – is concretely contributing to a more stable and inclusive global market. To achieve qualitatively better and less impactful results is crucial to implement a structured strategical plan that foresees innovative approach, smart sourcing and ongoing research and development continuous experimentation, shared and interconnected internal actions and the ability to move and to react faster to the market needs.

“Working and challenging ourselves everyday we get to know that a real change can only start from a mindset change – which is clearly the most difficult thing to do for a company but definitely the most important for a long-term success” - continues Ana Silva Tavares Head of Sustainability
